SARAH KOWENHOVEN wife of
CASPER (KASPAR) STUYVESANT

- I. PETER STUYVESANT, (1602-1672), Dutch Colonial Governor of New Amsterdam, was born in Schorpenseel in Friesland, Holland, on October 13, 1602. Much of Stuyvesant's youth must have been spent at the home of his grandfather, Johannes Stuyvesant in Doekum (Doldum). His father was the Rev. Balthazar Stuyvesant; his mother was Margaret Hardenstein. He studied at Franeker and entered the military service in the West Indies about 1635, serving first in Brazil; later he was Director of the West India Company's Colony of Curaco from 1643 to 1644. In April, 1644, he attacked the Portuguese Island of Saint Martin and was wounded. He had to return to Holland and there one of his legs was amputated; some authorities claim it was his left, others his right; some that it was amputated in Curaco; others that it was in Holland. Nevertheless, he lost a leg and thereafter he wore a wooden leg ornamented with silver bands. While recovering from the loss of his leg in Holland, he married Judith Bayard, sister of Samuel Bayard. The marriage took place at Breda, August 15th, 1645. Judith Bayard was baptized November 16th, 1608 at Breda. She was the daughter of Lazare Bayard and Judith De Vos. Lazare Bayard died in Breda 1643; he was the son of Nicholas Bayard and Elandina Camde. He embraced the Protestant faith and became a Minister. He died 1617. He was descended from an uncle of the famous "Chevalier Bayard".

On July 23, 1646, Peter Stuyvesant was commissioned Director of New Netherlands and the islands of Curaco, Bonaire, Au Riba and dependencies thereof in the West Indies. The commission is from the States General and the West India Company. On May 27, 1647, he arrived in New Netherlands with his wife, Judith Bayard, having left Texel Harbour December 24th, 1646. He was Director-General or Governor from 1647 to 1664, when an English fleet appeared in the bay and compelled the surrender of New Amsterdam to the British, after which the name of New Amsterdam was changed to New York. Stuyvesant in 1665 went to Holland, but returned to New York in 1667. He spent the remainder of his life on his farm called the "Bouwerie" from which the present "Bowery" in New York City takes its name. He died in February 1672 and was buried in the chapel on the site of which in 1799 was erected St. Mark's Church. Note - Will is dated January 19, 1671/2, proved March 7, 1671/2.

Judith Bayard, his wife, who was born November 16, 1608, died in 1686. The children of Peter Stuyvesant and Judith (Bayard) Stuyvesant, were:

1. Balthazar, baptized October 13, 1647, moved to Curaco; died 1675.
2. Nicholas William, baptized Dec. 2, 1648, died 1698. Will dated Aug. 13, 1698; married first Maria Beekman. The children of this marriage all died young and unmarried. Married second Elisabeth Slechtenhorst.

- II. NICHOLAS WILLIAM STUYVESANT, son of Peter Stuyvesant and Judith Bayard, was baptized Dec. 2, 1648, and had for sponsors the Directors of the Dutch West India Co. He married first on May 12, 1672, Maria Beekman, daughter of William Beekman; married second, Sept. 15, 1681, Elisabeth Van Slechtenhorst, daughter of Guritt, and grand-daughter of Brant Van Slechtenhorst. His will is dated August 13, 1698. His second wife died April 20, 1738.

Nicholas William Stuyvesant was a Captain of Militia and Alderman and his signature appears on addresses made to the King in 1687, 1690.

By his first wife, Maria Beekman, he had the following children, all of whom died young:

1. Judith, bap. Oct. 22, 1673; died before Dec. 5, 1694.

III. PETRUS STUYVESANT, son of Nicholas William Stuyvesant and Elizabeth Van Slechtenhorst, bap. March 21, 1685, married 1705 Rachel Eckerson, bap. April 11, 1685, was the daughter of Jan Thomassen Eckerson (Eckens, Eckeson, Eckisse or Eekins) and his wife Apollonia Cornelis, daughter of Cornelis Claassen Swits and Ariaantje Cornelis). Petrus Stuyvesant died (drowned) Dec. 11, 1705. Had a posthumous son born, baptized May 2, 1706, and named Benoni (meaning son of my sorrow). Rachel (Eckerson) Stuyvesant remarried March 1, 1712, Frans Pieterse de Vries (and had six children, baptized between 1713 and 1726). The record of Benoni's baptism is in the Baptisms of the New York Dutch Church. The entry follows a baptism of May 2, 1706 and reads: Ongetrouwt (unmarried) parents: Petrus Stuyvesant, Rachel Eckeson. Child, Benoni. Witnesses: Jan Eckeson, Jeroenias Borres, Ariaantje Montagne.

In 1741 a partition suit was brought to divide the property once held by Governor Peter Stuyvesant, consisting of 360 acres in what is now the central part of the City of New York. The partition suit was between Ann (Stuyvesant) Prichard, and her brother Gerardus Stuyvesant. The other heir, if he had lived, would have been Petrus Stuyvesant, the father of Benoni. In this partition suit were two interesting points; first, that the Dutch law with regard to the ownership of real estate, and its division among the heirs of the deceased owner, prevailed at that time; and that another Dutch law was in force, viz. that no child under 21 years of age could marry without the consent of his or her parents, nor were the children of such a marriage entitled to inherit property, so Benoni, the son of his deceased brother Petrus and Rachel Eckeson, to whom he was legally married under the English law, was declared illegitimate under the Dutch law and got no share of the property.

Tradition states that Benoni learned the carpenter trade and as a young man removed over to New Jersey. Here he signed his name Peter.

IV. PETER (BENONI signed his name PETER) STUYVESANT, son of Petrus Stuyvesant and Rachel Eckeson, baptized May 2, 1706, removed to Bergen Co., New Jersey. He married Pryntie Preyer, born and living in Bergen, New Jersey, October 27, 1733. She was the daughter of Casparus Preyer and Saartje Andries (or Andriessen) born October 22, 1717. Youngest child of Samuel Covenhoven, born 1710? Married Jan. 30 1726 Sarah Drinkwater. In the Holland Society Year Book, it gives the birth of two children, Pieter (Peter) and Edward, the death of Edward and the death of a daughter Sara, born March 4, 1759, died Feb. 26, 1774. In Baptismal records, it shows that Sara was a daughter of Kaspar Stuyvesant

There are many things to be done in the way of improving the condition of the poor, and it is the duty of every one of us to do our part. We must first of all be kind and generous to those who are in need of our help. We must also be careful to use our money wisely, and not waste it on unnecessary luxuries.

It is also important that we should be honest and trustworthy in all our dealings. We should not cheat or steal, and we should not tell lies. We should also be careful to keep our promises, and not break them. We should be kind and gentle to all people, and not be angry or quarrelsome. We should also be careful to keep our minds and hearts pure, and not be influenced by bad company or bad habits.

These are some of the things that we should do to

- IV. PIERRE STUYVESTANT, son of Petrus Stuyvesant and Rachel Eckerson.
Changed his name to Peter and settled in Bergen Co., New Jersey.

The following was told the writer, J.S. Demorest by his grandmother, Hannah Stuyvesant, daughter of Edward Stuyvesant and Lucretia Stowe, shortly before she died in 1907 - she was then 83 years of age:

She said she was a direct descendant of Gov. Peter Stuyvesant; that her branch of the family was disinherited on account of her forebear marrying very much beneath him. He married a saloon keeper's daughter; that he died before their child was born and when born he was baptized with a name meaning sorrow. She could not recall the name. When this son grew to manhood he changed his name to Peter, the same as his father.

Also a letter written by John Stuyvesant, brother of Hannah to their brother Sylvanus, dated Decatur, Michigan, Feb. 2, 1887:

"You stated you wanted to know all about the heirs of the Stuyvesant property in New York. The heirs consist of three families: Uncle Samuel, Aunt Prini and our father Edward Stuyvesant. I can't give you all of the names. Father's oldest brother's name was John or Samuel. These were the two oldest names. His sister's name was Prini; she had only one child. Uncle John had no children. Uncle Samuel had eight children. How many lived to grow up I can't tell today, but some died quite young. Our father and mother had seven children only five of us lived to man to manhood and womanhood. Our father's name was Edward Stuyvesant; our mother's name was Lucretia Stowe. Our father's father's name was Jesper, the Dutch was Casparus and what grandmother's name I have forgotten".

The problem from the above with the writer is, what happened to Peter who was born Nov. 6, bap. Nov. 22, 1761. No record of his death, although there is of Edward, bap. Feb. 12, 1764 and died 1779, and also record of the death of Sara, born Mar. 4, 1759, died Feb. 26, 1774.

Did Kasper move from New Jersey over to New York State and Peter died there and no records of same?

Dear Dr Demorest:

Your letter of May 23rd received. Miss Marion
H. Cousenhoven is a member of our family association, and no better introduction is needed.

The Sarah Cousenhoven of whom you wrote was a daughter of Samuel Cousenhoven and Sarah Drinkwater. She was their last child, supposedly, and I do not have her birthdate or any further data on her at the moment beyond her marriage to Casparus Stuyvesant or Stuyvest. The Edward Cousenhoven and Anna Boone, his wife, who witnessed the baptism of her son Edward, was her brother, who was himself baptised Oct. 9, 1723, in N.Y. Her other brothers and sisters were: Franz, Maria, Samuel and another Maria who died young.

Samuel Cousenhoven was a son of Francois Kou-wenhoven and Catherine Olivier. Francois was the son of Johannes and Saartje Frans. Johannes was a son of Jacob Wolfertse Cousenhoven and Hester Jansen. Jacob was born about 1612 in Holland, one of the three brothers who came to Nieu Amsterdam with or soon after their father Wolfertse Gerretsen van Cousenhoven.

If you would like this in more detail, I can supply
it for you.

Most sincerely,

(sgd.) Tam D. Conover

NOTES ON JACOB WOLFERTSE

He resided on High St., formerly Pearl St., where he had a brewery. Licensed Sept. 24, 1664, by Gov. Nichols to trade in his sloop to Albany and with the Indians. His name appears on the list of "Great Citizens" in 1657. He was one of nine men representing the principal classes of community from 1647 to 1652, and he went to Holland to protest against arbitrary measures used by Gov. Stuyvesant. He belonged to the First Advisory Council, which met July 15, 1642, in New Amsterdam. This was later dissolved.

"On June 7, 1656, Jacob van Coumenhoven of New Amsterdam pursuant to will dated April 20, 1653 (Nester's) acknowledged to be indebted to his children, Neeltje, Petronelltje, Johannes, Lysbet and Aeltje, begotten by his deceased wife, Jester Jansen, in the sum of two thousand guilders-Carolus. To each a just fifth part and 150 guilders to Hendrick Vandewater." (N.Y. Gen. Coll)

"Jacob VanCoumenhoven came to this country with his father in boyhood, was taken in by Wouter VanTwiller into service of the Company as an assistant and afterwards became a tobacco planter. The Company has aided him with necessaries as is to be seen by the books, but they have been paid for". (from Tienhovens Answer to the letter of Nine Men).

From Court Records of New Amsterdam.

On same day Court appoints him one of arbitrators for a case between Gyslan Janson and Gysbert VanderDonck.

Egbert Gerretson styled "Skipper of Jacob Van Coumenhoven's sloop" when he was called as wit. in another case.

His house was built on land known first as the "Old Church Lot", a wooden church having been built on it as early as 1633. It is on north side of present Pearl St., about 60 x 80 east of Whitehall. The lot with church was purchased by Jacob Wolfertsen vanCousenhoven April 8, 1656, which he sold Sept. 8, 1656, to Isaac deForret.

Sept. 25, 1656, he and Frederick Lubbertson are in difficulties over a horse sold to Jacob which has not been paid for; Court orders Jacob to pay at once or Lubbertson will take the horse back.

On Oct. 2, 1656, Claes Bordengh and Pieter J. Mariers complained they could not obtain payment from Jacob; requesting that execution may proceed and that they may receive monies for the lot sold on the beach; and since the couwerie at Gravesend was also exposed for sale; then date postponed; and will again some day be offered for sale; they request that they may sell it by execution in case it be not sold at voluntary vendue, in further satisfaction of their debt. Request was found just.

Oct. 9, 1656 Johannes d'Peyster, plaintiff, demands payment of sum of money, being book debt now due two years according to debt Oct. 30, 1655. Def't. acknowledges debt and promises to pay plaintiff before departure of ship lying here.
